Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey Results

Empowering employees. Inspiring change.

Governmentwide Management Report

A Message from the Director

I am pleased to share OPM's 2021 Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey (OPM FEVS) results with you.

The pandemic has strained the public and private sectors alike, including federal employees. But the 2021 OPM FEVS survey results show that during a second year of unprecedented challenges, federal employees demonstrated remarkable resilience while continuing the critical work of the federal government on behalf of the American people.

The OPM FEVS survey demonstrates that federal workers maintained a positive view of their agency's performance over the past year. The results show strong agreement that agencies were able to meet the needs of their customers (88% agreement) and achieve Agency goals (85% agreement). Agency supervisors were a strong driver of this performance confidence and overall employee engagement, with 80% positive score on the Employee Engagement Index. Support from supervisors on health and safety and promoting a positive work environment were important factors during this period.

However, similar to trends in the private sector, the overall Employee Engagement Index moved to 71% from 72% in 2020 and the Global Satisfaction Index fell to 64% from 69% in 2020. Due to the pandemic, survey administration in 2021 differed from 2020 in some substantial ways, making year to year figures less comparable. For example, the 2021 OPM FEVS was in the field in November and December of 2021, rather than the more customary spring administration period and the total fielding time was reduced from six weeks to five to avoid holiday period conflicts.

As always, the value of this rich data is in how well Agencies and leaders put the insights into action. This year, the Biden-Harris Administration has made a major commitment to the federal workforce by making the first priority in the President's Management Agenda (PMA) 'strengthening and empowering the federal workforce.' As one of the priority leads for this important work, I am proud to help lead the federal government's efforts to honor and uplift America's workforce. The PMA includes specific goals and measures to improve employee engagement in the workforce, and both the 2021 OPM FEVS survey and forthcoming revamped 2022 survey will provide critical data to inform agencies' efforts to meet our important goals. The 2022 survey will return to the traditional late Spring timeframe and will feature new content to support Agencies' plans to drive improved engagement.

In closing, I want to thank respondents from across the federal workforce for being generous with their time and honest with their feedback in the 2021 OPM FEVS Survey. These insights are vital to the success of federal agencies and the missions they are charged with. And to every public servant helping to meet America's needs during these unprecedented times, thank you for your dedication and commitment to the cause.

Introduction

The 2021 OPM Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey (OPM FEVS) provided a platform for Federal employees to share their opinions and perceptions regarding their work experiences. Employees' perceptions enable leadership to identify actionable improvements to realize greater workplace effectiveness and, at a government-wide level, provide information regarding a variety of topics important to shaping future policies.

Survey Content

The 2021 OPM FEVS retained the streamlined set of core questions included in the 2020 survey. Each participating agency satisfies statutory requirements through inclusion of the Annual Employee Survey Items in regulation. Core survey content also contained measures widely used for strategic workforce development, the Employee Engagement and Global Satisfaction indices. With the pandemic ongoing, some of the items used to address the COVID-19 pandemic on the 2020 OPM FEVS were retained in their entirety or modified for the 2021 OPM FEVS. Questions allow identification of ways in which employees achieve missions while responding to a pandemic.

2021 FEVS Administration and Reporting

The 2021 survey differed from past survey administrations in a few substantial ways. These include the timing and duration of administration, the sampling method, the reporting levels available, and the inclusion of an optional pilot test of possible future survey content, for example, questions developed to align with the June 25, 2021 Executive Order on Diversity, Equity, Inclusion and Accessibility (<https://www.whitehouse.gov/briefing-room/presidential-actions/2021/06/25/executive-order-on-diversity-equity-inclusion-and-accessibility-in-the-federal-workforce/>).

The timing of the 2021 OPM FEVS mirrored the 2020 survey with the survey administered in the fall rather than the more customary spring administration. Similar to the pandemic delay of the 2020 survey (launched in September of 2020), the 2021 survey was further delayed to November. To avoid a conflict with traditional holiday vacation time and support opportunities to participate, the fielding period was reduced from six weeks to five weeks.

For the past several years OPM conducted a census of all eligible employees in participating agencies. The 2021 survey was considered a 'sample' although, in practice, survey invitations were restricted to a statistically valid sample of employees in only the ten very largest agencies. The majority of Federal agencies were a census, with all eligible employees receiving an invitation to participate. A new innovation, agency leadership were given an opportunity to "opt in" temporary employees not previously considered eligible to receive a survey.

In a departure from past years, due to implementation delays and short duration to complete the survey dissemination process, reporting has been streamlined. The number of reports has been reduced and results have been limited to overall agency and first level units. Public reporting is similar to 2020 reports and results by item and agency can be retrieved from the OPM FEVS website (<https://www.opm.gov/fevs/reports/>).

Going forward, the 2022 OPM FEVS features a focus on a return to both the spring survey cycle and to providing reports down to lower levels within each organization. Building on ongoing research, OPM anticipates incorporating new content.

At a Glance

The 2021 OPM FEVS results show a resilient Federal workforce despite the challenges of the ongoing pandemic. Employees share positive feedback about their ability to meet the needs of customers and their agencies, and they feel supported in balancing work and life responsibilities.

High scores below point to favorable employee perspectives regarding agency practices and policies. Equally important, however, are items with low scores indicating aspects of Federal government agencies where employees may perceive the need for change. Government leaders and oversight bodies review low scores to make decisions and determine actions for improving workplace functions and conditions (e.g., items related to performance and communication).

Employee Engagement Index

The OPM FEVS Employee Engagement Index (EEI) uses questions from the survey to measure conditions that can lead to the state of engagement.

While the OPM FEVS does not directly measure employee feelings of engagement, it does assess the critical conditions conducive for employee engagement (e.g., effective leadership, work which provides meaning to employees, the opportunity for employees to learn/ grow on the job). Assessments of the engagement potential of Federal workplaces indicates leverage points for developing and sustaining work conditions capable of supporting employee engagement, particularly important to performance.

The framework used for developing the EEI assumes that organizational conditions lead to feelings of engagement. These feelings, in turn, lead to engagement behaviors (e.g., discretionary effort, persistence), and then to optimum organizational performance.

The EEI is comprised of three subindices: Leaders Lead, Supervisors, and Intrinsic Work Experience. Each subindex is assessed through questions on the OPM FEVS as listed below. See Appendix A for the wording of each item number shown in parentheses.

Leaders Lead

Reflects the employees' perceptions of the integrity of leadership, as well as leadership behaviors such as communication and workforce motivation. (Q. 32, 33, 34, 36, and 37)

Supervisors

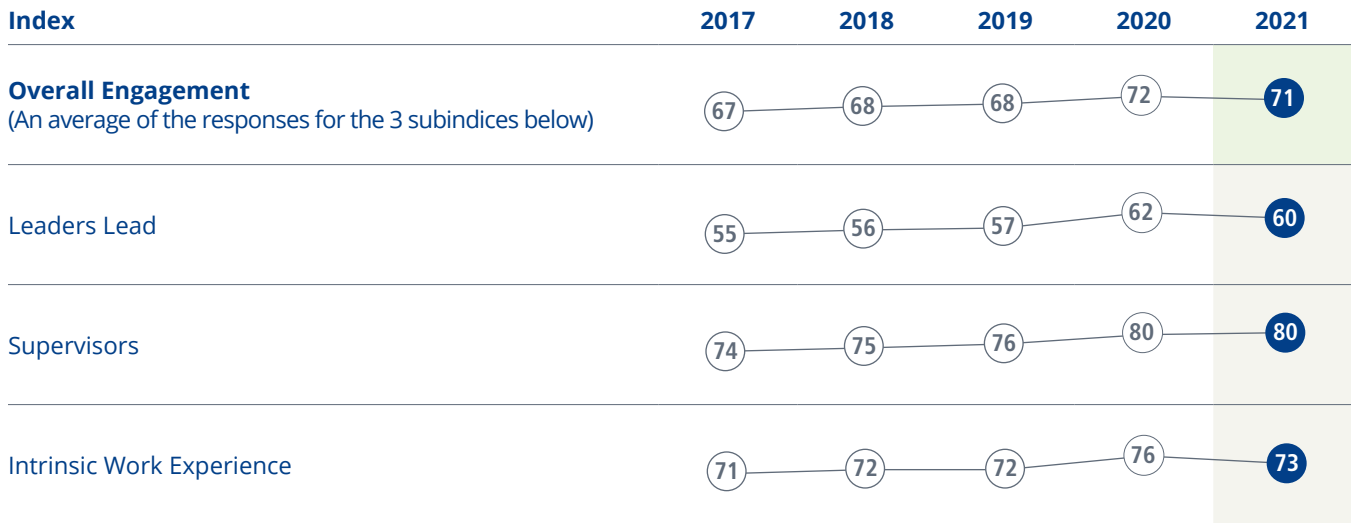

Reflects the interpersonal relationship between worker and supervisor, including trust, respect, and support. (Q. 27, 28, 29, 30, and 31)

Intrinsic Work Experience

Reflects the employees' feelings of motivation and competency relating to their roles in the workplace. (Q. 2, 3, 4, 6, and 7)

Global Satisfaction Index

The Global Satisfaction Index measures employee satisfaction on four aspects related to their work: the job, pay, organization, and whether they would recommend their organization as a good place to work.

Understanding employee satisfaction along these four dimensions gives agencies a sense of how employees are feeling and is important for agencies in the long run – satisfied employees are more likely to stay in their jobs, reducing turnover.

The Global Satisfaction Index is an average of the scores of the four items below:

Job Satisfaction

Considering everything, how satisfied are you with your job? (Q. 42)

Pay Satisfaction

Considering everything, how satisfied are you with your pay? (Q. 43)

Organizational Satisfaction

Considering everything, how satisfied are you with your organization? (Q. 44)

Performance Confidence Index

Performance Confidence is defined as “The extent to which employees believe their organization has an outstanding competitive future, based on innovative, high-quality products and services that are highly regarded by the marketplace¹.” The Performance Confidence Index on the OPM FEVS is a combination of five items assessing employees’ perception of their work unit’s ability to achieve its goals and produce work at a high level and, ultimately, provides insights into agency performance. This index was new for the 2020 OPM FEVS and retained in 2021.

The Performance Confidence Index is an average of the responses for the five items below:

Met Needs of Customers

Employees in my work unit meet the needs of our customers. (Q. 14)

Contributed Positively to Agency Performance

Employees in my work unit contribute positively to my agency’s performance. (Q. 15)

Pandemic and Employee Well-being

Urgent priorities for an effective COVID-19 response included ensuring protection of employees from the threat of illness. Agencies could only continue to accomplish missions during the pandemic to the extent employees were safeguarded. Clear leadership commitment to protecting employee health and safety and distancing efforts through telework have both been essential for achieving continued workforce performance. To assess responses to the pandemic, the OPM FEVS team introduced a measure of leadership commitment to and support of employee health and safety.

Highlights: Where and How Federal Employees Work

This section shows where and how employees worked (e.g., telework, worksite) to meet their job demands and safeguard themselves during the pandemic.

Employee Support

Employee support is defined as the organizational climate established by leadership to support workforce health and safety. Given the importance of leadership practices and policies to achieving employee health, safety and performance, relevant items were included in the 2020 OPM FEVS and retained in 2021. The six-item climate measure assesses leadership and supervisor support of employee health and safety, using a 5-point agreement scale. The figure below shows the percent positive score for the six items.

Health and Safety Support

Conclusions

The 2021 OPM FEVS was fielded while the COVID-19 pandemic was still creating major challenges in the workplace and in peoples' lives. During 2021, agencies were at different stages of transitioning back to the physical workplace. Health and safety concerns were continuing and telework changes (impending or being implemented) were underway in many agencies. Despite these challenges and changes, survey results continued to show a resilient Federal workforce.

While the 2020 OPM FEVS scores for Employee Engagement and Global Satisfaction were higher than the current 2021 scores, it's likely that the current scores are reflective of several unique factors. First, the opportunities for telework has declined since the peak of the pandemic. Telework is positively related to higher scores on Employee Engagement and Global Satisfaction and declines in telework could be linked to a decline in these scores. Also different from past years, the survey was fielded very late in the year, and only for five weeks. While canceling the survey for 2021 was discussed, OPM felt it was important to push forward with a survey to continue to collect valuable employee feedback. The very late and shortened timeframe was necessary in order to have a survey at all. Finally, the pandemic was continuing into a second year, beyond what was initially anticipated. The pandemic challenges were taking a toll on all aspects of everyone's life.

These factors are complicated by large scale changes in the workplace context with many agency leaders exploring and implementing hybrid working models (i.e., a mix of working arrangements, including onsite, remote, and schedule flexibilities). Managers and supervisors are learning to manage employees working in alternate and possibly changing locations. Employees are facing a change in how many may have worked, with some transitioning from maximum telework to a mix of telework and onsite work. As agencies develop new hybrid working models and/or transition fully back to the physical workplace, all Federal employees are in a learning mode. Change can be hard and stressful, and a hallmark of 2021 has been frequent and ongoing change.

Moving forward, Federal leadership is taking steps to ensure successful hybrid workplaces and innovative workplace modifications are underway. A focus on metrics from the OPM FEVS, such as the Employee Engagement Index, in the President's Management Agenda, will help focus and guide leadership to achieve successful initiatives. Times are changing. The ways in which managers lead and employees work are changing as well. The Federal Government is on the cutting edge in the implementation of groundbreaking initiatives for managing the Federal workforce in innovative ways to support excellence in the service of the American people.
